The anonymous Floridian's impressive mock Veyron looks almost exactly like the real thing from the outside; the headlights, vents, grilles, and bodywork are like a carbon copy. It even features a retractable rear wing, just like a real Veyron. The only things that seem to be amiss with the exterior are the wheels and lack of carbon fiber. At a standstill, just sitting in a parking lot, this fake Veyron might play the part well enough that passersby would need to examine each minute detail to be sure that this isn't in fact a real Bugatti. The seats, dash, and headliner were all customized by the seller and look the part, but the switchgear, door latches, and steering wheel give up the act. Unfortunately, the performance doesn't imitate the real Veyron's in any way. For starters, this replica still has the stock Mercury Cougar engine, a 2. The real Veyron is powered by a hp quad-turbocharged 8. If the thought of owning a fake Bugatti is appealing to you, head over to Craigslist Orlando or Car Export America , where it has been listed for sale by owner. Speaking of the owner, he just a guess is pretty self-aware and modest, listing the car as a "REPLICA," clearly describing its provenance, and commenting: "I have been sent the nicest text messages ever. And uplifting. And some very weird and sickening. New Cars. Buyer's Guide. Type keyword s to search. Today's Top Stories. Specs Detailed. Craigslist Orlando. A closer inspection shows that it's actually a Mercury Cougar modified to look like the Bugatti, which the seller cheerfully admits. If the looks don't fool passersby, neither will the hp stock V-6 engine from the Cougar. A "cougar" is typically defined as an older woman who is primarily attracted to younger men, often involving a sexual relationship. Although there are no precise ages , the woman is usually 35 years or older with the man more than eight years her junior. Some people consider "cougar" to be a sexist, derogatory term , but the meaning varies from offensive to empowering depending on the person. The term "cougar" is an example of how modern culture defines and prescribes roles for heterosexual women and men in society; other similar stereotypes include sugar daddy and sugar mama. What these have in commonâ€"aside from an age differenceâ€"is an imbalance of power and wealth, with the wealth and power being held primarily by the older person. Other related terms of "alpha cougar," "beta cougar," and "sweet" or "angry" cougars appear to be categories invented by dating websites. Cougar relationships have appeared in pop culture over the years. Celebrity couples made up of older women and younger men include Susan Sarandon and Tim Robbins, who were 42 and 30, respectively, when they started dating in ; Sheryl Crowe 41 and Lance Armstrong 32 in ; Demi Moore 48 and Ashton Kutcher 27 in ; Rachel Hunter 37 and Jarret Stoll 24 in ; and Ivana Trump 59 and Rossano Rubicondi 36 in The earliest documented use for the term "cougar" as it pertains to a woman seeking such a relationship is said to have been in professional sports locker-room talk. In the s, the Canadian ice hockey team the Vancouver Canucks used the term to refer to the older, single women who attended their hockey games to pursue players sexually. The Canadian dating site cougardate. Columnist Valerie Gibson leveraged her investigations into cougardate. Since that time, there has been an increasing number of newspaper articles and blogs on the subject. Such relationships have been seen in television programs such as "Sex and the City" â€" , "Cougar Town " â€" , "Lipstick Jungle" â€" , and "Riverdale" â€"ongoing , and movies such as "Prime" , "The Rebound" , "Adore" , and "The Boy Next Door" Seductive older women are also featured in pornographyâ€""cougars" is a common subgenre in pornography websites. Many more cougar-specific dating sites have been launched as well, such as dateacougar. The popular stereotype of a cougar is a heterosexual White or Black unmarried woman between the ages of 35 and She maintains a youthful physical appearance, either by exercise, cosmetics, cosmetic surgery, or a combination of these. She is comparatively wealthy, or at least financially independent, and she expresses her sexuality by publicly pursuing younger men for casual relationships or sexual encounters. She does so, she says, because she wants a partner who both appreciates and can satisfy a sexually assertive and financially independent woman. That stereotype also suggests that cougars are commonly looking for fun, temporary sexual liaisons. At the same time, they are perceived as women who strive to correspond to strict, ageist conceptions of female beauty, i. Sociologist Milaine Alarie compiled statistics for her doctorate thesis on the subject of relationships defined by older women and younger men. She found that overall, and just as in the past, women typically marry men who are slightly older than they are. In , the U. Census reported that women were older than their husbands by four years or more in only 7. By contrast, men are older than their wives by four years or more in Canadian statistics are similar. Thus, in both marriages and nonpermanent relationships, the trend is that men are typically older than their female counterparts. Though women are sometimes younger than their partnersâ€"entering "cougar" territoryâ€", it is more likely that they will be involved with a younger man in a nonpermanent relationship, rather than a marriage. Alarie proposes that negative reactions to cougar relationships are so strong because they violate long-standing social norms. For example, there is an assumption in Western culture that men value youth and beauty in a partner, while women value financial stability. Men are also understood to have stronger sex drives than women and are expected to make the first contact, while women are encouraged to wait passively for men to choose them. Finally, there's the idea that older women are expected to be asexual. Cougar behavior turns all of these norms on their heads. In Alarie's qualitative study of 59 women who had participated in cougar relationships, results showed that women had different experiences of social norms depending on their age. For example, older women were less likely to be affected by the social discourse about cougar relationships, were less preoccupied than younger women were about how long the relationship would last, and were less worried about whether they would miss out on having children or losing their partners as they continued to age. The meaning of the term "cougar" seems to vary with the speaker. On the positive side, cougars are associated with gender equality, an outgrowth of the sexual revolution, and the availability of reliable contraceptives, which have given women more freedom when choosing a partner. They are also an explicit reflection that sexuality is not necessarily connected with childbearing. Moreover, an increase in status, education, and income means that a woman can establish herself as the more powerful party in a relationship should an unequal power dynamic be desired by both partners. However, there is a considerable negative undertone prevalent in the media, particularly on internet sites such as askmen. Cougars are seen as predators of unwary men or victims of the cultural imperative to find value in their physical appearance. There are many reasons why women might choose to enter into relationships that give them the "cougar" label. She may be less likely to have to eventually support her spouse physically or emotionally in their final years as his health declines, but would rather be cared for herself. Women still do live longer than men, so it may be a rational choice to select a younger partner. Women also say that younger men appreciate their financial independence, their interest in sex, and their freedom from stereotypes. But the drawbacks are severe: There is a social stigma, and men are often pressured by their friends and family to find someone younger. In a cougar relationship, women are not likely to want more children when their partner does, and while many men say that their partner's higher income is a benefit, some research shows that can also lead to conflict. Updated January 14, Key Takeaways: The Slang Term "Cougar" Cougars are defined as older heterosexual women typically ages 35â€"55 who pursue sexual relationships with men who are eight or more years younger. Cougar marriages are relatively rareâ€"only about 1. Cougars can present both positive and negative images: They are independent, sexually confident women, or they are women who are striving to conform to the social norms of youth and beauty. The young Cougars showed no signs whatsoever of stage fright as they jumped out to a double-digit first half lead and withstood a Crusader challenge in the second half to score a victory to advance to the sectional final on Saturday afternoon. Frontier made five 3-pointers in the opening quarter to pull out to a point lead and led by as many as 14 points in the second. Cougar sophomores Kara Ramsey and Jalynn Shapley each knocked down a pair of first quarter triples as Frontier held a lead at the end of the opening period. Midway through the second quarter Frontier went on a run sparked by field goals by sophomore Tacey Kirkpatrick and senior Logan Haught to push their lead to 12 and after the Crusaders responded with six consecutive points, the Cougars returned the favor by scoring eight straight points with Haught and sophomore Emily Cisler executing the high-low game to perfection resulting in a pair of field goals apiece. SCC managed to whittle the lead back down to 10 before the first half came to a close to remain within shouting distance of the Cougars. Frontier freshman Grace Knowlton canned her second 3-pointer of the game to open the second half and sophomore Kylie Lamm followed with an inside bucket to stretch the lead to Central Catholic had one last run in them as they scored eight straight points to close out the third quarter and picked up right where they left when Ali Grimm connected from long range to open the final quarter to cut the FHS lead back to just eight at The young Cougars responded by scoring the next seven points to push their lead back to 15 and they held on the rest of the way to score their 10th victory of the season compared to 11 losses. The Cougars placed three girls in double figures led by Lamm with 12, Knowlton with 11 and Ramsey with Frontier got a huge spark from its non-starters as Haught and Shapley tallied eight and six points respectively. The loss ended the season for the Crusaders with a mark while Frontier will advance to the sectional final Saturday afternoon at home against the neighbor River Pilots.. have already come up. None of those issues have anything to do with Pulaski County High School or the Cougar football team. The problem is other school systems. As I understand it, Montgomery County has made the decision to play us in Season 2 sports. Roanoke County schools are currently in limbo. The decision on letting football and other Season 2 teams play outside the county has been delayed for at least another week by their school board. If they do not allow those teams to play outside of their county, Pulaski County will be in search of two games. I understand the concerns around COVID, but the National Federation of High School Sports released new guidelines this week clearly stating that transmission of the virus through sports has not been as big a risk as it was originally thought it would be. Yes, you should attempt to practice social distancing. Sports, and more importantly students and student athletes, have not been the cause of massive outbreaks as some thought they would be. States all around Virginia played Fall football. While there may have been a few very minor issues, the overall numbers proved that as long as mitigation factors were observed, sports were safe. Pulaski County has taken on anyone and everyone who would play us during basketball and all other Season 1 sports. Basketball especially has played a tough schedule. Pulaski County basketball players have also taken the court each night wearing face masks after an early season issue with a player from another team cost the Lady Cougars a day quarantine. They battled back from that, however, and the first day they were allowed Pulaski County took on one of the tougher teams in the state. They not only took on Patrick Henry on the road, the pulled out a huge win after 10 days of no practice. In my opinion the answer is no. Hopefully, as the COVID vaccine continues to roll out, things will start to move back to a more normal pace. Hopefully that happens before the Cougar football team and volleyball teams take the field and court. Having no fans at Kenneth J. As for the Cougars, practice began as planned Thursday morning bright and early. The whistle blew at a. There is a new sense of urgency. It just feels different. With the exception of former Head Coach Stephen James, most of the staff remains the same. That consistency should be a huge asset to Coach Dixon as he continues to learn names and faces. As for Coach Dixon, there was no question about who was in charge and what the standards were. He is clearly a stern man who believes in discipline. He believes in accountability. I have no doubts that Mark Dixon will be an asset to Pulaski County High School, not just in football but as a role model in the school as well. If all teams currently scheduled to play the Cougars do, in fact, allow their teams to play, then Pulaski County should have a chance to test themselves with the six regular season games now on the schedule. First up is the previously mentioned Cave Spring and Hidden Valley games. Friday, March 12, the Cougars are set to host the Blacksburg Bruins. Friday, March 26, will be the final regular season home game as the Patrick Henry Patriots come to test the young men from beside the big corn field that may or may not still be covered in snow. Friday, April 2, the Cougars travel to Salem to take on the Spartans. The regional playoffs are set to begin the following week. Only four teams from each region will make the playoffs this season, so every game will count. Friday, April 16, will be the region champlonship. Four teams will enter the state playoffs Saturday, April The big dance will take place Saturday, May 1. The questions concerning how many fans will be allowed, who will be allowed and all of the other things hanging out in limbo will eventually be answered. For now, all the Cougars can do is prepare. Hundreds of Manson Northwest Webster Community School District students discovered their love of learning in the kindergarten classroom of Tricia Larson. Larson died in July. To honor the memory of their co-workers and friends, two MNW teachers, Jan Nelson and Stacy Origer, have established two new scholarships for students who want to go into teaching. One scholarship will be for students who want to go into elementary education; the other will be those seeking a career in secondary education. Area residents have a chance to help get this scholarship tribute started by purchasing a Cougar Strong T-shirt. Manson Northwest Webster is, of course, the home of the cougars. The shirts feature the cougar logo and the initials TL and JE. We encourage everyone, even those without a direct connection to Manson Northwest Webster, to support this fine effort. For more information go to Known as one of the truly great muscle cars, the sleek and easy gliding Mercury Cougar has swept the automobile market scene in its budding with its luxurious appeal and brawny engine. This performance icon has evolved through the years from muscle to charisma. Even with its stop in , the Cougar remained an iconic vehicle of legendary status in power and class. First introduced as an upscale version of the Ford Mustang, the Mercury Cougar boasted a mature and luxury oriented styling while maintaining its reputation as a muscle car. Not only that, this performance car also featured a longer wheel base and was available in XR-7 and GT trims. By , a coupe model was made available, and its appeal earned the fancy of drivers right away. This batch of charismatic Cougars would soon be the transition from muscle to luxury. The second generation signaled the end of the muscle car era with new configurations leading to luxury and fuel economy. The plush pony Cougar is now made compact with a sportier look. While it received a major overhaul to be more luxury oriented, the revamped Cougar received a drop down in performance with only a standard hp engine. With a more upsized Cougar frame, the big-block V8 engines were now specifically designed for torque instead of horsepower because of its heavier curb weight. Also, only the XR-7 trim of the third generation survived the end of the muscle and pony market. Because of the fuel crisis, the manufacturers decided to lean to a larger and more personal-luxury oriented Cougar that mirrored the Ford Thunderbird. Despite this change of market, the automobile continued to sport the V8 engine but with a decreased motor size. The fifth generation of the Cougar featured a boxier and more angular look. This change of aesthetics, however, was not received well by the public. It featured an AMC Gremlin-style quarter windows, which were well loved by the consumers. By the end of the batch, a 20th Anniversary Edition package was offered with special configurations for the luxury coupe. The seventh generation highlighted with a sportier and larger redesign. Additionally, a squarer rear quarter windows, which no longer upswept were also equipped. Aside from the installation of new type of windows, the Cougar also received a longer wheelbase and a fully independent rear suspension for the first time. The last generation of the Mercury Cougar was equipped with a contemporary package of DOHC four-valve engines, a fully independent multilink suspension, and a front-wheel drive. It was also the first and last generation to offer a hatchback Cougar. We've Made a Site Update. Refresh to the latest version. Retrieve quote. Track order. Sign In or Create Account.
