As a faculty member, you will automatically receive a Canvas shell for every class you teach. Shell arrival lead-time i. You do not need to be trained in Canvas before you use these shells, but it is highly encouraged. It was a 2-step process. Recently, the Academic Senate voted for a single 'one-stop-shop' certification course. This single certification course will teach both Canvas and online teaching pedagogy. So in a nutshell, you still need to learn Canvas in order to teach online, but you don't have to take a separate Canvas Certification class. That Canvas content will be included in the one-stop-shop course offered by Distance Education. Faculty are still encouraged to take the 3-week Intro to Canvas course for a deeper dive into the LMS. Is there any shorter training available? If you would like to teach online, you need to take the Online Teaching Certification course offered by Distance Ed. Do I need to take this course to teach online? Why did I receive this email? No, you do not need to take this course. This course is very similar to the one offered here at ECC for free. We encourage you to take the free version taught by Elana if you would like to take an instructor-led course on the LMS. You likely received the email because at one point you used or requested an Etudes shell and so your email is in their database. Please see the Flex Matrix. You can get free access to Lynda. Classified staff who are interested in teaching someday, or staff who would like to learn more about Canvas may take the course. However, enrollment priority is given to faculty and ITS staff. When enrollment opens for a new course, we send out an email with a sign-up link. Please sign up as early as possible, as the class tends to fill quickly. On occasion, additional spots may open up, and we will send out follow-up advertisement emails. How do I sign up? You will need to sign up via the link found in the advertising email we send out. Please check your college email regularly. It is now free. You can sign up on the One website. This fits my schedule better. Does this self-paced class count toward certification? Do I need to take the Intro to Canvas class as well? Click on the Canvas login link at the top of the El Camino webpage. Your login will be the same as when you log in at your desk. Do not put the elcamino. In other words, how much lead-time will I have before the semester begins? I think one might be missing. Her contact info is gperez elcamino. Canvas FAQs.
